A Dead Cat Mine.
It was the man on whose land natural gas was first struck in the Findlay, O., district, and he was telling some of us about it as we waited in the depot at Columbus.

"Wall, you know," he began, "my son Bill was a great hand to read. One day he laid away a book he had been reading and says to me:

"Dad, I've been reading up on minerals and I'm goin' to find suthin' right here on our farm."

"Shoo, Bill," says I, "but you won't strike nothing outside of cobble stones and worms."

"But he went at it and begun to dig and bore and fool around and leave me to hoe the corn, and one day he struck suthin'. There cum suth an infernal smell that both of us was drove to the house, and then the smell got so bad that we was drove to a neighbor's, and we had to let the hogs out of the pen, or they would have keeled over.

"Bill," I says, when I got where I could breathe again, "you said you'd strike suthin', and you have. You've wasted three months' time gettin' down to whar Christopher Columbus buried about a thousand tom cats, and we've all been driv off the farm in consequence. It's my turn now to strike suthin', and you kin git ready for the all-fired kickin' in a boy ever got."

"I give it to him, gentlemen, and then I went spookin' around to find somebody who'd buy the farm at about the cost of the barn. A feller who seemed to be havin' catarrh and didn't mind the smell closed up a deal with me, and I had to grin as I walked off with his money under my arm. I kept on grinnin' fur about a week, but then I heard some news that stopped me, and I guess it's three years since I've opened my mouth sideways. Them dead cats was worth a hundred thousand dollars to me, and I sold 'em for $900 and walked around patting myself on the back for bein' so all-fired cute."—New York Sun.

MISS Braddon as "My Lady." Among the new knights are the brothers of two novelists, Miss Braddon and Miss Olive Schreiner, and Miss Olive Schreiner has often occurred to me that it would be well to find an order for women which would give those possessing it the right to prefix "Lady" to their names. "Let me make the people's songs and I will govern them with ease," said somebody. And if any minister had the power to create "Ladies" my impression is that he would remain minister for a very considerable time. What peace would Jones, M. P., have if Mrs. Jones knew that it only depended on his submissiveness for her to blossom forth into Lady Jones?

Putting, however, aside this political advantage, why should distinguished men be made knights and distinguished women not be made ladies? If we are to have knights with ribbons round their necks and across their breasts, it would be only fair if these ornaments were also conferred on their wives. I am entirely against woman suffrage, but I see no objection to women sharing in all this sort of decorative adornment; and assuredly, if they merit a title, it is absurd that the only way for them to obtain it is to give one to their husbands. Miss Braddon, I make no doubt, is deserving of the prefix of "Sir." But her sister Miss Braddon, has at least an equal right to the prefix of "Lady."—Exchange.

Successful Unknown Book. I was talking with a subscription publisher, and in the course of our conversation he reached in his library and pulled out a book the title of which I never heard. It was called "God, Home and Heaven," a book as pretentious in size as in title. "What is there peculiar about the book? Well, I will tell you. Of that work there have been sold over one million copies," said the publisher, "and yet I'll wager that there are salesmen in the biggest New York stores who never heard of the book, and will tell you there is no such work printed."

This struck me as rather odd and I determined to make the test. I went into six of the largest book stores in New York that day and asked for a copy of "God, Home and Heaven." It proved exactly as my friend predicted. I encountered only one man who ever heard of the book, and he said he had no idea where I could get a copy. "Doubtless out of print for years," he added. And yet within two blocks of that man's store there was at that time printing an edition of 50,000 copies of the book on the presses!—Edwin W. Bok's Letter.

MARY Anderson's Photographs.

The reason that actresses are so successfully photographed is that they understand the laws of photography and conform to them. They usually assume the direction of the performance for themselves, and the photographer is willing to let them. Mary Anderson always superintends every detail of the operation that puts her features upon paper. Her London photographer says no picture of her face, except in direct profile, was ever made without having the negative changed so as to make the outline of the cheek a little flatter than it naturally is. Miss Anderson thinks the contour of her full face is not oval enough, and so she is careful that any photograph of her shall remedy the imperfection.—New York Evening Sun.

... are very gentle in their manners, feed separately from each other, each particular member of the family taking his or her basket and turning with back to all others in the room.

WOMEN AND NICE.

The reason why a woman is afraid of marriage is a profound mystery indeed. It has never been explained to me, and the reason is, that some women are constantly in such a vague, irritable condition that the slightest thing irritates and upsets them. The cause of this unfortunate state of mind is usually some functional derangement, such as hysteria, neurasthenia, hysteria, somnolent, or peculiar nervousness, some derangement or peculiar nervousness incident to her sex; or, it may be due to inflammation, ulceration, or displacement of some of the pelvic viscera, or to other causes which are peculiar to her sex. From what I have seen, Dr. J. H. Pierce's Favorite Remedy, but, if I may say so, I am certain in its curative result that its manufacturer sell it, through druggists, under a guarantee of its giving satisfaction in every case of money paid for it. It will be prepared in a soft, pliable, non-stimulating, non-irritating, non-narcotic, non-toxic, "Proprietary" substance, nervous excitability, irritability, asthma, prostration, hysteria, insomnia, and other nervous symptoms attendant upon disease of the womb. It relieves anxiety and despondency.

BREVITIES.

Bar silver 97½.
J. F. Aitken left for San Francisco last night.

Mr. Goyote of Verdi was in Reno yesterday.

The condition of D. D. Butterfield, who attempted suicide was somewhat improved last night.

S. Arnstein of Wadsworth spent yesterday in Reno and went up to the Capitol city this morning.

Henry M. Stanley, the great African explorer, passed through night before last on his way to San Francisco.

Thomas Nelson of Stone House, Humboldt county, arrived in Reno yesterday. He says live stock looks well out in the sagebrush.

Yesterday ten cars of beef cattle were shipped from Reno to San Francisco, where Nevada beef is in greater demand than for some time past.

The Silver State reports John Reed of Lovelock as being very sick. Mrs. Reed died last Sunday which made the second death in Mr. Reed's family in two weeks.

The contest at the Carson Opera House between the lightweights, Shea and Branman, to-night will doubtless be attended by a number of Renoites. The fare for the round trip on the V. & T. is $2.

Special rates of two dollars for the round trip have been made to Carson to-day on the local train. The fight to finish with two-ounce gloves between Shea and Branman takes place at the Capital to-night.

A Postoffice has been established at Stone House, Humboldt county, with Robert Henderson as Postmaster. This is a great convenience to ranchers along the Humboldt between Golconda and Iron Point.

The Enterprise calls the LeGrave secret ballot bill "The boss ballot bill." If the Enterprise is right the bill must have been amended in the Assembly so that its author will not know it, as LeGrave is not a boss man or a boss tool.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Receipts and Prices Last Week.

The Chicago Live Stock Report of March 6th gives the estimated receipts of cattle for the week at $1,136, and the official receipts for the previous week $3,235.

PRICES OF CATTLE.

Compared with last week values for good shipping dressed beef and export steers are 10 to 15 cents per 100 lbs higher, while the medium grades are only steady. The export demand has been light, but Eastern shippers took their usual quota. Compared with the corresponding week last year shipments show a heavy falling off. The home demand for beef has been moderate and is attributed to the Lenten season and the heavy supplies of cheap hog product. During the corresponding week last year supplies were much heavier; the demand was good from all sources, and values advanced from 5 to 10 cents per 100 lbs. on all grades, extra prime steers selling from $5 to $6 per 100 lbs., with good dressed beef and shipping steers from $3.50 to $5, while in 1889 we quoted extra prime steers at $4.60 to $4.85. Exporters $3.85 to $4.60 with fair to good dressed beef and shipping steers from $2.85 to $3.75 per 100 lbs. A train of seventeen cars of fed Texans were on the market Wednesday, but under special orders from the owner, the weight and price have not been given out; however, good steers of this class would have sold higher than a week ago.

THE NUMBER AND PRICE OF SHEEP.

Estimated receipts of sheep for the week $1,027, official receipts for the preceding week, $3,013. The strong feeling that has characterized the market for the past four weeks continues, and the strong prices of last week have been well maintained. The market during the past week has been subject to slight fluctuations and closing fully steady for all desirable grades, while the common and medium kinds are a shade lower. The Eastern demand has been good, shipments showing an increase over last week. The supplies have consisted chiefly of corn fed Westerners, and sold from $5.25 to $5.90 per 100 lbs, chiefly $5.40 to $5.85. Several bunches of fed Texans have arrived, and sold from $3.85 to $4.65 per 100 lbs., weighing from 65 to 90 lbs. each and some 80-lb. Mexicans at $5.25.

A Reception.

A reception was given Department Commander A. J. Buckles last night by the members of General O. M. Mitchell Post G. A. R. and the following interesting program was rendered: Quartette by Messrs. Roberts and Evans, Mrs. Taylor and Miss Emma Dean. Remarks by Rev. Wm. Lucas, Post Commander, and Mrs. I. B. Marshall, President Women's Relief Corps. Music, violin and piano, Prof. W. A. Hillman and Miss Quasif.

Department Commander A. J. Buckles was then introduced and gave a very interesting history of the G. A. R., its organization, and stated its teachings, and the object of the order, after which a solo by Miss Dean and a recitation by Miss Gould closed the very pleasant evening's entertainment.

HOW TO RIDE A HORSE.

WHAT MUST BE DONE TO HAVE A CORRECT SEAT AND SADDLE.

Reasons Why Many People Who Ride Have So Much Trouble with Their Stirrups—A Riding Master Gives Some Excellent Rules and Suggestions.

A saddle is constructed right if it gives the rider the greatest possible comfort and the most secure seat, with almost total absence of exertion of muscles of his legs in order to maintain his balance. Almost every riding master prefers a certain make of saddle, and teaches a certain style of seat as the best, and his pupils, taking perhaps little or no trouble to study others and to investigate further, have to accept his. But, irrespective of the science of riding, there is one shape of saddle which is the most comfortable, viz., the saddle which is so constructed that, in accordance with the laws of gravity, the rider's body will and must sit in balance without trying to do so.

Much has been said and written about "how you should sit on the horse." Perhaps you have been told to grasp the saddle or the horse firmly with thighs or knees, to have your toes higher than your heels, to keep the heels away from the horse, to bend your back to be springy or to straighten yourself to sit firmly, etc. Perhaps your teacher has made great efforts and exhausted all resources of his knowledge to impress upon you how you should sit, and yet at a trot you lose the stirrups, you lose your balance, and unless trotting very slowly, and unless your horse has an easy trot, you have to bring him to a walk to regain the stirrups.

If you are not experienced, and your horse trots roughly, you are in discomfort and in danger of losing your seat. If your horse is nervous and not well broken to the touch of the heel the flapping of the stirrups against his flanks renders him uneasy and prolongs the task of "getting your foot in the stirrup."

WHERE THE TROUBLE LIES.

Examine your saddle; it seems nice, soft and comfortable; the stirrups as heavy as should be—even their tread covered with leather or rubber to prevent slipping from your foot; but slip they will. Why? Look at the shape of your saddle, at the positions which the saddler has assigned for your seat, thighs, knees and feet, and see where he has attached the bars for the stirrup leathers on the saddle tree. Your saddle is perhaps too long and, as most English style saddles, flat; its lowest point, instead as near as possible to the center, is back toward the end; you are almost sitting on the cantle. In order to bring your knees to the knee puffs, which are too far front, you have to stretch your legs forward. This obliges you to carry your stirrups forward with your feet away from and in front of the place where they would hang by their own weight, and in order to keep them at your feet you have to shorten the stirrup leathers and bear heavily on the stirrups, otherwise they will slip back.

What is the result? As soon as your foot loses the stirrup the latter, according to the law of gravity, returns to the lowest position which the length of stirrup leather allows far behind your foot; then your foot, too, having lost its support, and with nothing to bear against, together with your leg, according to the law of gravity, tries to slip back in order to hang as near as possible to the center of gravity; and then your legs will hang far back, the knee puffs, perhaps on the bare horse almost behind the saddle skirts.

To avoid this by muscular exertion you try to force your legs up and front into a position very tiresome to maintain. But if you, according to the law of gravity, have the lowest point of the saddle in its center; if you have this center as close as possible to the horse's back by reducing the thickness of the saddle to a minimum; if you drop yourself into this lowest point of the saddle to stay there; if you drop your legs to where they will stay by their own weight instead of holding them forward and raising them by muscular exertion; if you have the stirrup leather bars attached far enough back to be in a line with that place where your feet meet the stirrups, with stirrup leathers so long as to raise your toes high enough to give you an elastic tread on the stirrup without cramping the muscles of your thighs and knees, then your body, legs, feet and stirrups will maintain their positions by their own weights according to the law of gravity; after each displacement resulting from the movement of the horse your body will fall back into the lowest part of the saddle; your thighs, knees and feet will not become tired because you are not using muscular exertion to hold them in their places.

By the law of gravity they always fall back into them. Your stirrups and feet, even if disengaged from each other, will, as it were, meet unintentionally at their places. If turning your toes slightly toward the horse the stirrup will by its own weight try to find its place and slip on your foot. The displacements from their positions of your body, thighs, knees, feet and stirrups will be followed by their involuntary movements according to the law of gravity to fall back into the places which their weights assign to them.

Have your saddle built so that no muscular exertion be required to keep you in its lowest (center) part; that your legs, thighs, knees, feet and stirrups retain their positions by their own weight, and you will enjoy that comfort which you can never find in a flat saddle with the lowest point back at the cantle, with the knee puffs too far front, with the saddle pad raising you several inches above the horse and with leather and straining, etc., built up high between your legs. Have the tree open longitudinally in the center from the front to the middle, allowing circulation of air between you and the horse and you will have more ease to yourself and less sore backs for your horses.—C.
